The Harrison Report, President Truman, and General Eisenhower

Private foundations and other groups partially fulfill some of these functions at present, but their scope is incomplete and inadequate.

Report of the International Committee of the Red Cross on its activities during the second world war (September 1, 1939)

The abuses should be corrected. In my opinion, however, we have drawn too heavily for nonscientific purposes upon the great natural resource which resides in our trained young scientists and engineers.

Conference reports of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter

Perhaps then we were overzealous in our surveillance.

The Franck Report

Harrison, United States representative on the Inter-Governmental Committee on Refugees, which was forwarded to me under cover of your letter of 31 August, 1945. When aided by selective devices for picking out scientifically talented youth, it is clear that large sums of money for scholarships and fellowships and monetary and other rewards in disproportionate amounts might draw into science too large a percentage of the nation's high ability, with a result highly detrimental to the nation and to science. If the United States would be the first to release this new means of indiscriminate destruction upon mankind, she would sacrifice public support throughout the world, precipitate the race of armaments, and prejudice the possibility of reaching an international agreement on the future control of such weapons.
