The study highlights underlying inequities that may contribute to the elevated risks for some groups, including structural racism, barriers accessing health care, potential for increased transmission in overcrowded housing, and overrepresentation in essential occupations. The , released in October 2020, asserts that COVID-19 has not affected people in Canada equally. There is no single solution that can undo hundreds of years of racism, and solutions will need to come from a wide range of places, organizations and individuals.

Ethnicity, Nationalism, and Minority Rights

We look forward to working with the government as it continues in this promising direction to ensure the human rights of British Columbians are protected now and for the future. There is almost inevitably a link between the language we speak or the accent with which we speak a particular language on the one hand, and our ancestry, ethnic origin or place of origin on the other.
