It would be foolish to make strategic decisions based on successes of other companies. Not only does community management help brands find opportunities to address complaints, but it also helps to foster positive conversations, which in itself can create and maintain more happy customers. Its goal of guiding companies to a profitable level with healthy finances and growth is successfully described in these pages.

The result is higher revenue growth and what has become a lethal competitive weapon against all PC manufacturers. One of the key missing links for generating revenue growth at most companies is upstream marketing. Of course, achieving this combination is almost impossible, because high growth is a drag on profitability.
