Whether that could be executed was another question because this government was notorious for not being able to successfully execute transversal projects. DTI was introducing a common exporter passport; it therefore recognised where people were with continued exporter development and was continually improving this aspect. Clause 16 of the PBR Bill stated that in the event that indigenous knowledge was used, a person needed to obtain permits or licences in terms of other legislation and then attach those documents to the PBR application, in order for the PBR to then process it.
