The ECtHR concluded, for instance, that the abolition of, or at least a moratorium on, the death penalty by the state parties indicated that the exception made in the provision on the right to life Article 2 1 ECHR was abrogated and its imposition constituted inhuman and degrading treatment in the sense of Article 3 ECHR, in spite of the fact that not all states of the Council of Europe had ratified the additional protocol on the abolition of capital punishment. While his own treatment of the subject in his second report might itself appear over-refined and complex, that was necessary for a thorough treatment of the issues.
