The guidelines recommended one nurse for every three to four infants for the lowest risk babies and a ratio of more than one nurse per baby for the most complex cases. The cause of any significant drop in growth percentile on either the standard or Down syndrome growth curve should be investigated.

Nursing Interventions for Infants, Children, and Families (Hardcover)

. Organic failure to thrive is a result of a disease condition. Success stories were common; those who died or suffered long-term complications of prematurity got little attention.

Nursing Management of Diarrhea in Infants and Children

Keep communication open; discuss with the client the possible side effects and outcomes while maintaining an optimistic attitude. Priapism is another complication common in children and adolescents with SCD.

Are there ways to reduce the risk of infant mortality?

Ideally, therapists should be pediatric specialists who have particular knowledge about Down syndrome.
