24 artists reinventing what figurative painting can be

For me, the choice to be mainly a painter and to use the codes of abstract painting, as they have been defined historically, is not only an artistic challenge: its main meaning is occupying a territory that has been denied to women historically. Goldin continues to photograph love, gender, domesticity, and sexuality, but a 2002 hand injury has unfortunately left the great artist with less mobility in her hands. Jordan Casteel, Serwaa and Amoakohene, 2019, oil on canvas, © Jordan Casteel and Casey Kaplan, New York Jordan Casteel The 31-year-old Jordan Casteel is an American figurative painter who lives and works in New York City.

Chantal Joffe Painter Born in Vermont but raised in Britain, Chantal Joffe has art in her blood — her mother is a watercolor painter and her brother is a contemporary artist and novelist. The effect is beautiful, but almost too beautiful, even disorienting at times, though always kind of comforting. In fact, Kusama dealt with pop art, minimalism, and feminist art movements before they were popular, making her an influence on contemporaries such as Andy Warhol and Claes Oldenburg.

Ettinger Bracha Lichtenberg Ettinger b. The rest, as they say, is history.
