Early American Craftsmen: Chapter 10

Hera — probably the same as Hero — appear again in the Philadelphia Directory of 1810. Where we are proudly Made in the USA. Much of the old brass and copper ware was made by obscure local craftsmen whose names have not been preserved.

Early American Craftsmen: Chapter 10

All sorts of domestic utensils and many other articles were made of pewter.

The Americana Pewter

And as shown in the touch marks of Nathaniel Austin above, touch marks used prior to the American Revolution tend to show English influence, while those used afterwards often include the American Eagle.

American Pewter: Kerfoot, J.B.: public-docs.talentcoach.ir: Books

The hollow ware is worth rather more than the flatware. The following is an introduction to the types of marks that may be found on American pewter. For the few 17th century American pewterers that have been identified, hallmarks are the only marks that have been found.
