The University of Exeter

During this period Railtrack carried out an extensive public consultation exercise, which resulted in the revision of the original proposals; it then submitted a Supplementary Order on 29 September 1999. Work affecting this was completed in time for the December 2011 timetable change, when 10,000 extra peak-period seats were provided.

Timeline

In the new timetable, around 600 trains with traditionally low patronage are proposed to be knocked off the system, while around 400 trains are being either merged or upgraded. Compared to open-ended answers from respondents in an interview, questionnaire or results are easier to compile and analyze.

When you establish a timetable beforehand, you will have more time to research and create a plan that will eventually result to a more well-researched and well-written research action plan. The new trains are designated and the first one came into service in June 2016. Rather than being prodded and poked to come up with a firm timetable for things which are not completely within their control, it would be much better if Messrs Barr and Steel were given the space to do a bit of crab-walking on this subject, and focus on the things which the Canberra community really needs and can sort of afford.
