This gate and tower was at the first strongly built up of stone, and so continued until the year 1577, in the month of April, when the same stone arched gate and tower being decayed, was begun to be taken down, and then were the heads of the traitors removed thence, and set on the tower over the gate at the bridge-foot towards Southwark. We are sensible how much the want of them hath contributed to the increase of Schism and Irreligion, and shall not therefore fail to do our parts towards the supplying that defect, being entirely disposed to promote everything that is for the interest of the established Church, and the honour of your Majesty's reign. About the year 1213 there arose a great discord between King John and his barons, because Matilda, surnamed the Fair, daughter to the said Robert Fitzwater, whom the king unlawfully loved, but could not obtain her, nor her father would consent thereunto, whereupon, and for other like causes, ensued war through the whole realm.
