An engaged course implements and strives for student participation, both with the professor and among students.
I was paying attention to everything being said, as I knew that we would be able questions and asked soon. Additionally, the expectation of being selected to follow up / advance an answer I provided myself, which further caused me to engage within the course.
I really like all the different ways we have to engage in the class. We have online polls, polling discussion boards, etc. I feel like we are taking advantage of all the technology we have.
Usually when I feel engaged in a course it is because my instructor is friendly, approachable, available, responsive, positive, and flexible.
Engaged in a course means that I actively participate and contribute to the course. That's more than just participating for the sake of passing, but also when I am focused on reading the material and seeking out more information to questions may have.
To be engaged in a course means participating in the discussion by answering the professor question and giving your opinion on the subject.
It means to answer questions during the lectures, comment on other students' posts, and ask questions when necessary.
The ultimate best part about us as online students is truly engage. We might due to participate in polls, but more comfortable doing my responses to speak my responses, we could also use chat to type our responses if we don't want to use the microphone. This is me as a engaged.
