Vergina the Royal Tombs and the Ancient City

Curiosity builds as the large green tumulus, neatly covered with grass and shrubs, is spied ahead. Not long re-opened after being closed for months due to COVID, there were very few visitors on the Sunday morning we went, which felt simultaneously a privilege and a pity, as there is so much of interest here that it deserves to be on every tourist's map. The excavations by Andronikos, whose name is now as well known in certain circles as Heinrich Schliemann and Howard Carter, revealed a treasure trove of weapons and body armor; jewelry; golden larnakes ash chests and oak-leaf diadems; banqueting equipment; luxuriously woven and ornamented burial shrouds; equestrian tack; and the remains of wooden mortuary couches trimmed with ivory, relief-carved human figures, including males whose faces have become iconic Macedonian images, sometimes said to depict Philip II and Alexander the Great themselves. A museum that leaves you speechless with the faithful depiction of the time and the setting.
