Maharishi Veda Vyasa

Puranas say that Vyasa took initiation at the hands of his twenty-first Guru, sage Vasudeva. The oldest commentary on the Brahma Sutras is by Sankaracharya; he was later followed by Ramanuja, Vallabha, Nimbarka, Madhya and others who established their own schools of thought.

To supersede this condition, Vyasa put another condition on him asking him to understand the verses even before he has recited them. It says that a Sutra should be concise and unambiguous; but the brevity was carried to such an extent that the Sutra has become unintelligible and particularly so in the Brahma Sutras.

ti. In fact, Ved Vyasa was the great grandfather of Kauravas and Pandavas.

The story of how Vyasa got inspired to compose Bhagavata

Vyasa is considered by all Hindus as a Chiranjivi, one who is still living and roaming throughout the world for the well-being of his devotees. . Then she asked him to give boon that her child shall be knowledgeable and learned and a big sage himself not a fisherman instead.
