Students' physical victimization in schools: The role of gender, grade level, socioeconomic background and ethnocultural affiliation

Following a shooting, schools often increase their investment in support services for students and overall school security. Schools in which the lowest grade was 3 or less and the highest grade was 8 or less were classified as elementary.

Social emotional learning (SEL) practices in schools: Effects on perceptions of bullying victimization

STATISTICAL TESTS The tests of significance used in this analysis are based on Student's t statistics. This report updates a number of indicators using the most recent data available on topics such as violent deaths at school, nonfatal student and teacher victimization, school environment, weapon use at school, fear and avoidance, and school safety and security.

Social emotional learning (SEL) practices in schools: Effects on perceptions of bullying victimization

DIFFERENCES BY SCHOOL SIZE Students at larger schools are more likely than students at the smallest schools to be exposed to bullying, physical attack, or robbery. Results from this report indicate that LGB youths, specifically, are at a disproportionately higher risk for interpersonal violence victimization compared with heterosexual youths.

Bureau of Justice Statistics (BJS)

The possibility that students may experience or be threatened by robbery and physical assault while at school has sparked national concern. This report presents information on personal student victimization from the 1993 National Household Education Survey NHES , based on the responses of 6,504 students in grades 6 through 12 who were surveyed. This report is the 22nd in a series of annual publications produced jointly by BJS and the National Center for Education Statistics, Institute of Education Sciences, in the Department of Education.
