Evangelium Vitae (25 March 1995)

The word of the Lord shows concretely the course which life must follow if it is to respect its own truth and to preserve its own dignity. It is this deep love for every man and woman which has given rise down the centuries to an outstanding history of charity, a history which has brought into being in the Church and society many forms of service to life which evoke admiration from all unbiased observers. All who commit themselves to following Christ are given the fullness of life: the divine image is restored, renewed and brought to perfection in them. In this contrast between threats and insecurity on the one hand and the power of God's gift on the other, there shines forth all the more clearly the glory which radiates from the house at Nazareth and from the manger at Bethlehem: this life which is born is salvation for all humanity cf. The Second Vatican Council also addressed the matter forcefully, in a brief but incisive passage.

But do not give in to discouragement and do not lose hope. These could occur for example when, in order to increase the availability of organs for transplants, organs are removed without respecting objective and adequate criteria which verify the death of the donor. The divine origin of this spirit of life explains the perennial dissatisfaction which man feels throughout his days on earth.
