Steve Hedley: What The 1916 Revolution Means To Me

The past period has seen the DUP in particular — but also the UUP — in a permanent negative position, looking over their shoulder to the most rejectionist elements, and minority, who primarily want to stop the process and move backwards on rights and equality. The identity of its designer is still a source of dispute. The Volunteers were supplied with uniforms and equipment which the Citizen Army members had to buy themselves.

Sean O'Casey, East Wall and the Irish Citizen Army in 1913 » EAST WALL FOR ALL

If anything, that is an excuse, much as this entire exercise is, in finding reasons to sit on the sidelines and label 80% of Ireland racist labels like 'bogtrotters'. A war of words would erupt between the union factions. The Citizen Army's first handbill contained a list of reasons not to join the Volunteers, controlled by forces opposed to Labour, officials having locked out union men etc.

We aim to speak out on how political events affect women and children. Both sets of Volunteers and the Citizen Army had decided to march to Parnell's grave in Glasnevin to honour his memory. Connolly had been using the pages of the ITGWU's 'Irish Worker' to argue against working class participation in the imperialist war.

There are reports of Citizen Army involvement in the fight against the Black and Tans and even unconfirmed reports that the Citizen Army were involved in the burning of the Custom House.

Irish Citizen Army

The new state dumped the social radicalism that inspired a section of the rebels. That is why this debate is so welcome. After this point the data will either be deleted, or we may retain a secure anonymised record for research and analytical purposes.

Irish Citizen Army Uniforms and Equipment 1916

On April 6th 1914 the Dublin Trades Council officially recognised The Irish Citizen Army. The Good Friday Agreement represents a clear advance of the Irish national struggle, putting as it does the case for a united Ireland on a level footing with the status quo. During the civil rights campaign, the state, in collusion with militant loyalists, launched repeated attacks on the nationalist community culminating in the pogroms of August 1969.
