It cannot be doubted that this early training under the guidance of such a sympathetic and wise teacher greatly influenced the life of the future Socialist leader. At Venice he came across the King of Prussia, who took the opportunity to have more than one conversation with the man who had distinguished himself in the States General. I am making tremendous progress in the art of saying nothing in many words; I write reports many pages long, which are smooth and finished like leading articles, and if Manteuffel after reading them can say what they contain, he can do more than I.
