Collect thy sences; when thou wert awake didst thou heare nothing? And even as one body ejecteth a disease to his neighbour, as doth evidently appeare by the plague, pox, or sore eies, that goe from one to another: Dum spectant oculi laeos, laeduntur et ipsi Multaque corporibus transitione nocent. That, as Erasmus sayes of them, Isti quicquid non intelligent Hehraicum vocanly counted all things Hebrew which they could not understand. And if it imply any chief pleasure or exceeding contentment, it is rather due to the assistance of vertue, than to any ----- 1.
