Oh for God's sweet sake! ICB's life is fascinating and incredible to read. I am also not one of those gay people who seeks spurious validation in claiming people from earlier times as members of the gay community before such an identity, let alone community, existed. The story of her life, youth and family, education at Holloway College, self-sacrifice and self-effacement as demanded by her mother, and finally escape to London and a friendship with Margaret Jourdain that suited them both and enabled both to play the role they designed for themselves.
