Housman's homosexuality and his love for Moses Jackson.

Poetry

The most widely read oral life history is Black Elk Speaks 1932 , narrated by BLACK ELK Sioux to author JOHN G. Constab Ballads, however, presents a substantially bleaker perspective on the plight of Black Jamaicans and contains several poems explicitly critical of life in urban Kingston. Although it speeds up or slows down, depending on the movement of the narrative, the rhythm of prose follows a definite tempo.
