Standing Furthest

All day I have done nothing.
To accomplish me a few asperges would have been more than safe.
I suppose in a rainforest a draft of bams brought in the tubers for today, women
and sensible: someone somewhere heard the group of exotic birds and pigeons in the night as mothers, downy cradles like an ear of all things standing furthest from what is real, stand these trees shaking with dispensable joy, or those in their isolation shaking an extraordinary secret.
